For our 6th Annual Skin of Color Society (SOCS) Media Day, we will take a different approach from our traditional Media Day event, which in past years has included four in-person events in NYC and most recently, a virtual event.

Given the power of video in today’s media environment, coupled with tremendous interest in the expertise of SOCS members on numerous topics in skin of color dermatology, healthcare and society, we will dedicate this year’s media-related efforts to producing a series of educational videos for dissemination through news and social media.

The envisioned series of professionally produced short-form videos will serve a variety of important purposes, such as:

- ▮ To provide journalists, bloggers and content producers with engaging and usable video content on hot topics in skin of color dermatology, beauty, healthcare, medicine, and society.
- ▮ To be disseminated via PR Newswire and through a customized media outreach campaign, these videos can stand alone as news content, augment news stories in the works, and spark ideas for future features;
- ▮ To enhance and diversify our offerings in the SOCS educational video library, which are housed on the SOCS website and promoted via social media;
- ▮ To add to educational content available to members at no cost and the public for a nominal fee in the SOCS Dermatology E-Learning + Equity Platform (DEEP);
- ▮ To share on social media platforms by SOCS, SOCS members, supporters and collaborators to educate the dermatology and medical communities as well as the general public.
